20

LOGIN METHOD FOR IDENTIFYING DEVICES ON A NETWORK

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of logging in new devices to a network.
Each device stores a unique device identification number.
A network controller performs the login process by 5   sending and receiving patterns of requests and acknowledgements. It uses the acknowledgements to traverse a binary tree, and thereby "learn" the device identification number of a new device.

10